Harris, Madison, Alabama; 27 grandchildren; 5 great grandchildren; 3 aunts; 1 uncle; 4 brothers-in-law; 3 sisters-in-law; and a host of other relatives and friends.

THE TURN IN THE RIVER

Once I sat in Tyron Park in the city of New York, high above the Hudson River. I was watching a boat go up the river. Along many miles the boat was seen and with joy the waves of its journey were watched. Finally the boat disappeared around a bend in the river, and I could no longer see it.

Yet the picture of its beauty remains in my mind. The thought came to me that life and death are much like that.

Each of us has a journey to make, part of it is made in the presence of others who journey in our way. And then a day comes when a part of it takes a turn around a bend. Yet, all of us go in the same general direction - up the river.

So, if we remember the boat, each in his own time continuing his journey up the river, finds again those who journey ahead.
