Dear Sir:

We have been deeply concerned over your continued illness, and are pleased to know that you are improving. You and I went down about the same time, but I was more fortunate than you. After six weeks under Dr. James McLester, I was better off than I had been in many years, and am still improving.

Sara is very fond of you and has her mother save your paper for her each week. She is at the University this year, and it is well she was near home six weeks ago when she had to be rushed to a hospital for appedix operation. She had to be carried but two blocks, and was placed on the table in fifty minutes after her case was diagnosed. She had a bad one, but recoved rapidly and was back in school in three weeks, and is doing fine.

Bob Langdon prmised to get our son Groce a clerkship at the special session, and suggested that I write you about it. If there is a place that you can give him, we will greatly appreciate it. He is nineteen, a high school graduate, but won't go to college. A few weeks at the capitol might be worth something to him in finding himself.

Wishing you continued improvement and a final restoration to good health and happiness, I am,

Yours very truly,

Jack M. Pratt
