Dear Harry:

Some time back I learned that you had been confined to your home with illness. The same messenger, however, who gave me this information, also informed me that you were then out and were daily going to your office and working more or less. A few days ago your neighbor, Mr. Jesse R. Waldrop who for many years has been my friend, and who is a cousin of one of my law partners visited Bessemer and informed me that you are still sick. I often think of you and wish you to know that I admire you very much and hold for you the warmest personal friendship. I hope that your illness is of the temporary variety and that you may at an early date be again yourself.

If another Special Session is to be our lot, I don't understand how we can run it without you. You must therefore snap out of this so that you may be able to take your place in the House; the thing won't look right nor run right unless you are there.

Trusting that I may soon have the good news of your recovery I again assure you of my sympathy and warm personal friendship, I am

Yours truly,
