Wednesday —

Dearest Dad —

Being as today is the 17th,

I will pen you a note of love and sympathy — sympathy because poor Pa is getting so old and decrepit. It is certainly a hard life, I'm aging myself. However, I have just recovered, and still feel a bit weak but all right. I hope you will have a pleasant day tomorrow, on your birthday, and I wish I could be at home to help you celebrate it. Would send you something but I haven't the nerve to spend any more of your money than I have to. Instead I'll try to get in a good report this term. I passed Public Speaking today.

Have a bad schedule tho, Math and English on Monday and Sociology and History on Friday. Heard from Mother yesterday. Enjoyed your letter also. Wish I'd thought of it. You might

The Vals work out on Dudley Field now so we see some pretty good players. Enjoyed Baby's letter today but am afraid I'll never get to Auburn. "Heavy-up Yost" is here now and we are having spring fast-ball practice. Big Josh and all the boys practiced today. Vandy's base-ball promises are sad,

Well, Dad, just wanted to write you a birth-day note for lack of a more substantial reminder. I've always enjoyed your comradeship these life and your attitude of friend, adviser, and playmate. May I continue to receive its benefits for many years to come. Love to all, and wishing you a very, very, pleasant birthday, I am, your devoted son,
William -
